

Misato Morino
11/9/15
CLSK121, 7th period
Prof. Hunter
Draft #1

Pain Can Become Unforgettable Memory

When I was a kindergarten student, more than not often my mother scolded me. I was a last man who didn't learn things because I was not smart. If I got faults even though I was told not to do it many times in the past, my mother spanked me. Most of cace the parents span their children, children would not obey their instructions. After spanking, many children became more modest and noddod for parents' instructions.

First of all, pain can become the strongest memory for almost people. It means that what people learned with pain would be unforgettable. Painful learning is not good for children, of course, but pain is good material to prevent forgetting what children learned. If parents tell children something with pain, it might be a very important thing. The important thing will help children in the future.

Of course, the characteristic depends on each children. For instance, some children get angry easily, and other children become more stubborn than others. Therefore, some of them cannot obey their parents and others straightly. However, it would cause a kind of catastrophe. For example, if the children play outside till midnight without parents' permissions, strange person may take them out somewhere. It might be caused because children ignored a curfew given by their parents. To stain safe for them, making them learn by spanking cannot be help depends on the case.

Children should become patient against pain. Children can be brought up without pain like spanking. However, those children do not get used to pain given by other people or things which is not expected. Children should undergo a certain extent of pain by others to stand painful things like disease and injuries which might come in the future. More patient if children are, more challenging and stronger children become.

Everything is not good if it is too much, but a little pain should be needed to educate children. Children will learn many things in the rest of life, and some of learning will be more important than others to leave them from dangerous matters.